Corporate Social Responsibility Report FY25/26

Our Impact

Creating meaningful change in the communities in which we live and work

At Moray & Agnew, creating positive and lasting impacts in our communities remains a core part of who we are. Our commitment extends beyond client outcomes and is demonstrated through our investment in our people, community partnerships and responsible business practices.

Through collaborations with First Nations organisations, charities, community legal centres and not-for-profit groups, we work to improve access to legal assistance and support those facing barriers to justice.

Our approach to responsible business is grounded in three things: improving access to justice, supporting our communities and operating responsibly.

From providing pro bono legal assistance to people experiencing disadvantage, to supporting First Nations communities, investing in community organisations and reducing our environmental impact, we aim to create positive and lasting change.

We believe our greatest impact comes when we work alongside others. That is why we partner with community legal centres, charities, universities, First Nations organisations and not-for-profits to apply our skills and resources where they can make the greatest difference.

Access to Justice

Access to justice is at the heart of our pro bono program

Pro bono work remains an integral part of our practice and reflects our longstanding commitment to improving access to justice across Australia. Through these efforts, we continue to support individuals, communities and organisations experiencing disadvantage.

Every year our lawyers provide legal assistance to individuals, community organisations and not-for-profits that may otherwise face significant barriers to accessing legal services.

In FY25/26, our lawyers contributed 15,210 hours of pro bono legal assistance, representing an equivalent commercial value of $6.5 million.

More than 130 lawyers participated in pro bono matters with an average of 36.1 hours per full-time lawyer. We also contributed 8,528 hours through secondments to community legal centres, placing people directly within organisations supporting some of the most vulnerable members of our communities.

Guided by our National Pro Bono Practice and our Pro Bono Committee, our offices collaborate to identify meaningful opportunities where our expertise can deliver tangible community benefit and promote fair outcomes.

Since 2011, we have been a signatory to the Australian Pro Bono Centre's National Pro Bono Target, demonstrating our ongoing focus on providing access to legal support and justice.

Recognised for our pro bono contribution

Moray & Agnew was named a finalist for Pro Bono Program of the Year at the Lawyers Weekly Australian Law Awards in 2025 and 2026.

First Nations & Reconciliation

Creating pathways and strengthening relationships

We recognise the importance of building respectful, meaningful and lasting relationships with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and communities.

In 2025, Moray & Agnew formalised this commitment through the launch of our Reconciliation Action Plan (RAP), providing a framework for strengthening relationships and contributing to reconciliation across our firm and the broader community.

We recognise that reconciliation is an ongoing journey. Our RAP provides a framework for action, accountability and continued learning as we work towards meaningful and lasting change.

Indigenous Shaping Futures Scholarship

In partnership with the University of Newcastle, we continued the Moray & Agnew Indigenous Shaping Futures Scholarship in Law, supporting a First Nations student pursuing a career in law.

At Moray & Agnew we believe that increasing access to education and creating pathways into the legal profession can contribute to lasting change.

Our Communities

With offices across Australia, our community involvement is shaped by the people and communities around us. Each office supports charities, organisations and initiatives that are meaningful to its local community, reflecting the different priorities that matter across the country.

From fundraising and volunteering to community partnerships, donations and pro bono support, our people are encouraged to contribute where they can make a meaningful difference.

Moray & Agnew gives our staff access to a day of volunteer leave which provides opportunities to turn our commitment to action.

Our partnership with the Cerebral Palsy Alliance

For more than a decade, Moray & Agnew has supported the Cerebral Palsy Alliance through a range of initiatives, events, fundraising activities with our people coming together to contribute their time, resources and expertise.

This financial year, over 90 people across Moray & Agnew took part in STEPtember, collectively walking more than 24 million steps and raising over $18,000 for the Cerebral Palsy Alliance.

Our offices regularly host events and activities in support of the Cerebral Palsy Alliance and our teams have participated in a range of other fundraising initiatives including gala days, Christmas Giving, corporate events and other opportunities for involvement.
